Here are some bicycle safety tips for riding in your neighborhood:

1. Wear a helmet: It's crucial for protecting your head in case of a fall or collision.

2. Follow traffic rules: Obey stop signs, traffic lights, and lane markings.

3. Be visible: Wear bright or reflective clothing, especially at dawn, dusk, or night.

4. Use hand signals: Indicate turns and stops to alert drivers and pedestrians.

5. Stay alert: Watch for potholes, debris, and parked cars, and be mindful of pedestrians and pets.

6. Ride defensively: Anticipate the actions of drivers and pedestrians and be prepared to react.

By following these tips, you can reduce your risk of injury and enjoy a safe ride in your neighborhood!

STORY OF THE WEEK

By: Zechariah Lipitz

Chai, the 18th of, Elul is the birthday of the Baal Shem Tov, the great tzadik who brought Chasidut to the modern world and initiated its dissemination which will bring about the Redemption. Here are some reflections on the tzadik and his wisdom:

The Baal Shem Tov (the Besht) was once asked, "Why is it important for Jews to travel to visit the tzadikim of their generation? Why isn't it sufficient to read the words of the great Sages?"

He replied with the following Scriptural verse: "G-d said to Moses, 'Write this down in a book and place it in Joshua's ears.'" It might seem, at first, to be sufficient to commit Torah teaching to writing, but we see that Moses was told to transmit it personally to his pupil, Joshua. Thus, we see that when a Jew, with his own ears, hears Torah taught from the tzadik of his generation, it makes a lasting impression on him which influences his whole life.

To be in the presence of a tzadik has an impact on a person far greater than medicine. For a drug is capable of curing a person's illness, but it has no lasting impact on his future life. A visit to a tzadik, on the other hand, inspires in the person a holiness which endures long after he has returned home.

The Baal Shem Tov said, "Whoever spent a Shabbat with me, whoever ate at my table, has absorbed a portion of purity and sanctity which will protect him from evil desires long after he has departed from me."

Once the disciples of Reb Aharon Leib of Premizian were sitting on a Friday afternoon, telling wondrous stories of the Baal Shem Tov.

Suddenly the door opened and Reb Aharon Leib entered from the adjoining room and spoke to them:

"Don't speak about the Baal Shem Tov's miracles, but rather his great piety and saintliness. Every Friday, when it approached midday, the Besht's heart began to pound, and his insides would begin to rumble. Anyone standing near him would be aware of this noise, which was caused by his awe and trembling in the face of the approaching Shabbat."

Once the Baal Shem Tov visited a town where he was accorded the greatest honor and respect. He told the townspeople who gathered around him:

"You should know that when a person is honored and acclaimed by people, he is immediately brought to the attention of the Heavenly Court. All of his deeds are examined in the most exacting way to see if he is worthy of such honor. For one who is blessed with Divine wisdom and awe, it is a good thing, for he immediately examines his own deeds. His introspection causes him to do teshuva, and that makes all the honor he has received worthwhile.

It was once asked of the Rebbe of Ziditchov, "Why are these times different from previous ages? Since the Besht arrived in this world, he has drawn a huge multitude of followers to his teachings, which are essentially those of the 'Ari' (Rabbi Yitzchak Luria), whereas the Holy Ari did not attract such a large following. What is it in the Baal Shem Tov that has allowed him to have such great success in spreading his teachings?"

The Rebbe replied by way of a parable:

"Once, the people in a certain country were in need of a new leader. They had heard that there was an exceptional person living in a far-away land and they wondered if perhaps he might be the leader they were seeking. He was said to have great physical beauty as well as the noblest character -- indeed he was unique in his wonderful qualities. Still, they couldn't make up their minds about his worth until one man who had just returned from his land described what he had seen with his own eyes. Still, with his vivid descriptions, he succeeded in convincing only some of the citizens.

One wise person decided to take the initiative to go to that distant land and fetch the candidate back with him to his country. When the people of the land saw with their own eyes the marvelous qualities of the candidate, they unanimously rose and crowned him king.

Rabbi Shimon Bar Yochai and his followers were the first to reveal Holy secrets in the Zohar, but this book was closed to all but the initiates. Then came the Holy Ari who spread these teachings amongst the populace. But he, too, attracted only the greatest scholars, for his writings were very lofty and difficult to comprehend. When the Baal Shem Tov came to this world, he succeeded in showing that G-dliness is inherent in even the tiniest speck of matter in this low world. The Besht taught us how to reach G-d through each of our deeds, thought and speech, even the most mundane, and so, he succeeded in bringing all people closer to the Creator.

Q. What must a Jewish king have at his side at all times?

A. A Torah

THIS WEEK IN JEWISH HISTORY

By: Avi Hirsch

Israel had been at war with Arab states several times since its Declaration of Independence. The first Arab–Israeli War resulted in the establishment of a Jewish state, 1948 Palestinian exodus, and the 1949 Armistice Agreements. Egypt had restricted Israel access to the Suez Canal, leading to the 1956 Suez Crisis, wherein Israel invaded Egypt with the goal of re-gaining their access to the shipping lane.[5]

Following the crisis, Egypt agreed to the stationing of a United Nations Emergency Force in the Sinai to ensure all parties would comply with the 1949 Armistice Agreements. In the following years, there were numerous minor clashes between Israel and its Arab neighbors, particularly Syria, leading them to sign a mutual defense agreement with Egypt. On November 13, 1966, in response to Palestine Liberation Organization guerrilla activity, including a mine attack that left three dead, the Israeli Defense Force (IDF) attacked the village of as-Samu in the Jordanian-occupied West Bank. This precipitated the massing of troops by Jordan, and the launch by Israel of Operation Focus, which began the Six-Day War.

Operation Focus severely crippled Egypt's aerial capabilities, and Israel occupied the Sinai Peninsula, which they would hold on to until 1982, when they were formally recognized by Egypt. By the ceasefire, Israel was also occupying the formerly Egyptian Gaza Strip, as well as the Golan Heights from Syria, and the West Bank (including East Jerusalem) from Jordan. The 1967 Arab League summit was held on August 29 in Khartoum as the fourth Arab League Summit in the aftermath of the Arab defeat by Israel in the Six-Day War, and is famous for its Khartoum Resolution, known as "The Three No's"; No peace with Israel, no recognition of Israel, no negotiations with Israel. The summit also resolved that the "oil-rich Arab states" give financial aid to the states who lost the war and to "help them rebuild their military forces." The final communique of the meeting "underscored the Palestinians' right to regain the whole of Palestine—that is, to destroy the State of Israel." The outcome of this summit influenced Israeli foreign policy for decades.

Israel will always come out on top, no matter what our foes do to us. We will defend ourselves until the end.

Parshas Ki Seitzei. Perek 25. Pasuk 19. "תמחה את זכר עמלק".

"You shall ERASE the memory of Amalek". When we destroy Amalek, the world will finally realize that Hashem is the one and only. This pasuk hints to this idea. You see, if you ERASE the word זכר which equals 227 from עמלק which is 240, you get 13 which equals אחד! That is the hidden meaning of "תמחה את זכר עמלק". (Reb Noach Mendes).

SHEENAYIM MIKRA TORAH BOMB QUESTIONS

By: Dr. Shaul Schwalb

This week's parsha is fascinating in many ways. The amount of Mitzvos found in this parsha is large and very varied. Many of the commandments listed are very well known to us and as such are very understandable. Yet, there are some mitzvos that stand out.

Let's look at the mitzvos that begin the Parsha. We start with an odd story of a gentile woman taken by a Jewish soldier. The mitzva describes how he is to act. It directs how he must allow her to mourn for the life she no longer has. It instructs him to treat her fairly.

Next, we are presented with a commandment regarding the man that has two wives. He likes one more than the other. The posuk announces that once he has decided to indeed have two wives, he must have one that is loved less than the other. All kinds of repercussions exist because of this fact. The first wife is the mother of the eldest son, the one rightfully the heir to this man. Yet this man has a second wife he likes more, and he is pushing to make that younger son the heir. The law tells us that the man cannot do this!

Next, we have a commandment about a wayward son, a sinner that should die before his destiny so he can do so in innocence before he were to go bad. The Ben Sorror Umoreh must be brought in to court with both parents on the same page and with both parents looking and talking the same way.

Finally, yet another commandment example appears. A man marries, yet hates, his new wife. He creates a false story against the woman so that he does not have to pay the Kesuba cash. He may not do so.

So, what do these mitzvos have in common? What concept ties all these mitzvos? This Parsha has a strong focus on the real world lives of the Jewish people. For those who think that the Torah is a book of rules for angels, for those that are perfect human beings this week the parsha says otherwise. Reality shows its ugly face in this Parsha. The Torah tells us it does not end well! Hatred ensues, hatred of this woman, hatred of the child hatred all around. We are introduced to a father that decides to marry a second wife, without a divorce. This is a disaster in the waiting, yet we see it occur. The child will be a rebellious horror, yet it happens.

It's there, on the one hand, to remind us of what terrible outcomes can happen. Yet on the other hand, it counsels us on how to deal with the human frail condition.

RECIPE OF THE WEEK

By: Chanalee-The Challah Fairy

Oven baked sesame chicken

Chicken:

- 1 Kg (2.2 lbs) chicken breast, cut into chunks
- 1½ Cups flour plus 2 Tbsp for batter (for a crispier chicken I add half starch. Half flour. for gf u can do with starch only I've made with arrowroot and potato starch)
- 3 Large eggs
- 1 Tsp salt
- Oil spray

Sauce:

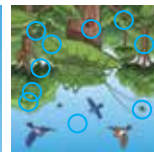

- 2 Tbsp sesame oil
- ½ Cup honey
- 6 Tbsp tamari (or soy sauce)
- 2 Tbsp onion powder
- 5 Garlic cloves, minced
- 1 Tbsp starch + 1 Tbsp cold water (slurry)

Instructions:

1. Heat oven to 195°C (383°F).
Line a baking sheet with foil or baking paper and spray with oil.
2. Whisk eggs, 2 Tbsp starch or flour, and salt.
Toss chicken in batter.
3. Dredge chicken in remaining flour and place on baking sheet. Spray tops with oil.
4. Bake for 15 min, flipping halfway. (For freezing, underbake by 2-3 min.)
5. In a saucepan, whisk all sauce ingredients. Simmer until slightly thickened.
6. Coat baked chicken in sauce, sprinkle sesame seeds, and bake 4-5 min more.
7. Garnish with chives or green onion.
Serve with rice or veggies etc.

To Reheat:

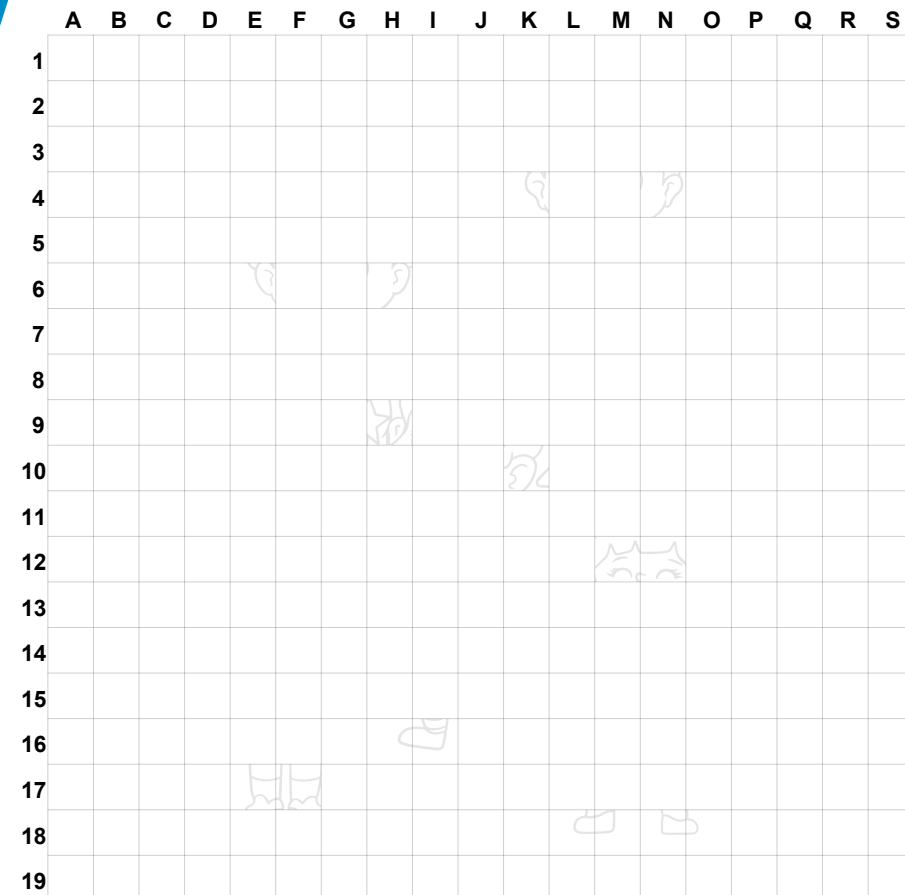

Defrost 7 hrs at room temp, then warm uncovered in oven at 90°C, or on a hot plate uncovered over a different pan not straight on (with a towel on top).
