Here are some bicycle safety tips for riding in your neighborhood:

1. Wear a helmet: It's crucial for protecting your head in case of a fall or collision.
2. Follow traffic rules: Obey stop signs, traffic lights, and lane markings.
3. Be visible: Wear bright or reflective clothing, especially at dawn, dusk, or night.
4. Use hand signals: Indicate turns and stops to alert drivers and pedestrians.
5. Stay alert: Watch for potholes, debris, and parked cars, and be mindful of pedestrians and pets.
6. Ride defensively: Anticipate the actions of drivers and pedestrians and be prepared to react.

By following these tips, you can reduce your risk of injury and enjoy a safe ride in your neighborhood!

STORY OF THE WEEK By: Zechariah Lipitz

Life in the Siberian work camps was generally difficult for the Jewish prisoners, but during the holidays it was even more so, because it was nearly impossible to perform the mitzvot (commandments) of each holiday under those terrible conditions. Reb Asher Sosonkin was exiled to Siberia for the "crime" of spreading Torah throughout Russia. Even under the harsh conditions of the work camp, he did his best to continue to observe the Torah and mitzvot. In the camp with Reb Asher was a Jew by the name of Nachman Rosemann. He had been brought up in an observant home, but when he grew up, he became an ardent communist, rising in the ranks of the Russian army. After serving in the army, he was arrested for illegal business dealings and was sentenced to 25 years of hard labor in Siberia. It was there in the work camp that Nachman felt a renewed interest in Judaism, and this led him to befriend the devout Reb Asher. Nachman was determined to learn all he could from Reb Nachman and to do the mitzvot as carefully possible. Chanuka was approaching, and Reb Asher asked Nachman to get a tin can to use as a menorah, in order to fulfill the mitzva of kindling the Chanuka lights. Reb Asher emphasized that it should be small, so that their activities wouldn't be noticed by any of the labor camp officials. "On Chanuka we celebrate a tremendous miracle, the triumph of the small Jewish army over the enormous Greek army. It is the victory of the spiritual over the physical. To simply make a menorah out of an old can wouldn't properly honor this holiday. I'm going to order a beautiful menorah!" Nachman proclaimed. Reb Asher was amazed at his determination. Nachman found a prisoner who happened to be a tinsmith and paid him several rubles to make a beautiful menorah. He did this knowing that if the authorities found out, he would be punished severely. And on the day before Chanuka, Nachman approached Reb Asher with a big smile. In one hand he held a menorah, and in the other hand he held a bottle filled with oil. On the first night of Chanuka, Reb Asher and Nachman placed the menorah by the door post of their barrack and prepared a cotton wick. The other prisoners watched curiously as the two men commenced this "dangerous" act. Reb Asher recited the three blessings over the lighting of the menorah and lit the wick with tears of joy and gratitude. They continued to light the menorah in this way until the fifth night of Chanuka. Just as Reb Asher and Nachman had lit the menorah, an armed guard appeared at the entrance of the barracks, announcing roll call. The prisoners were stunned. Roll call had never been announced at that hour before! The other prisoners told Reb Asher and Nachman that someone must have reported them, which would explain the unusual roll call. They advised the two men to hide their menorah in the snow, before the officer arrived. They refused to bury the menorah. When the officer entered the barrack, everyone stood still, anticipating the worst. After the officer finished counting the prisoners, he noticed the menorah. He stared at it for a moment, and then he asked Reb Asher, "Five?" "Five," replied Reb Asher, confused. The officer nodded his head, and without another word, turned and left the barracks. The prisoners were shocked. They were all wondering the same thing: Who was the officer? Why did he come to them at such an unusual hour and ask about the candles? Reb Asher was sure that the "officer" was none other than the Prophet Elijah.

ברוך אתה ה' - Blessed are You Hashem
גומל חסדים טובים לעמו ישראל - Who bestows bountiful kindness upon His people Israel

MEGA VORT By: Yoel Megadesh

Parshas Vayeshev. In the beginning of the parsha Yosef tells his brothers the two dreams that he dreamt. In the first dream 11 bundles of grain were bowing down to him and in his second dream 11 stars and the moon and sun bowed down to him. After the first dream it says that the brothers hated Yosef but after the second dream it says they were jealous of him. Why did the brothers have two different reactions to the two dreams?

1) The brothers thought that the first dream came to Yosef because he was thinking during the daytime that they would bow to him and someone naturally dreams about what they think about during the day. Therefore, they hated him for thinking about them bowing to him. However, the second dream which was about sun and moon and stars is not something someone thinks about during the daytime and therefore it must have been a real dream from heaven and therefore they were jealous. (Netziv).

2) The first dream was more materialistic since it was about bundles of wheat and therefore they hated him and were not jealous about anything materialistic. The second dream was about the sun and the moon and stars, which is more spiritual and therefore they were jealous. (Beis Halevi)
