SURPRISING FACTS ABOUT POPCORN

By: Peri Yablonsky

1. By volume, popcorn is America's favorite snack food.
2. Not every popcorn kernel pops. The ones that do not pop are called "old maids."
3. Long ago, people heated sand over a fire and stirred popcorn kernels in the sand to make them pop.
4. Most popcorn kernels will only pop when they reach about 350°F.
5. A single popcorn kernel can pop up to 40 times its original size.

One Pan Sriracha Chicken

A lifesaver for busy weeknights.
(Thank you Peasloven carrots for this recipe)
Quick and spicy Sriracha Chicken that's ready in under 10 minutes:

- 1lb boneless, skinless chicken breast or thighs cut into small chunks
- 2 tbsp Sriracha sauce or less
- 1 tbsp olive oil or more
- 1 clove garlic, minced or more.
- Salt and pepper to taste
- Optional: scallions and sesame seeds for garnish

Cook chicken in a hot pan with oil, then add Sriracha sauce and garlic. Simmer for 5-7 minutes or until cooked through. Serve hot with cooked rice garnished with green onions and sesame seeds if desired.
If you don't own a rice maker, may I highly recommend purchasing one. Every time you make rice it comes out perfect!!! The rice maker turns off when rice is done and keeps it warm, so you can leave the house while it's cooking. Want a link? Pm me.

Parshas Vayechi. Perek 49. Pasuk 27.

"בנימין זאב יטרף". In this pasuk Yakov blesses Binyomin as a tribe that will grab like a wolf that grabs his prey to his lair to eat. Rashi mentions that it is referring to Shaul Hamelech who was from Binyomin and he would vanquish his enemies. In sefer Shmuel (4:12) the story is told a man from the tribe of Binyomin that grabs away the Luchos from Goliath when it was taken away by the Pelishtim. Rashi says that it was Shaul. Now, there is a rule that everything is hinted to in the Torah. This story of Shaul is hinted to in our pasuk. "בנימין זאב יטרף". Binyomin, meaning Shaul who was from Binyomin will grab זאב which is gematria 10, hinting to the Luchos/(Reb Meir Moshe Hillel from Baghdad)

SHNAYIM MIKRAH TORAH BOMB QUESTIONS By Rabbi Dr. Shaul Schwab

Our Parsha begins with the request Yaakov Aveenu asks of his son Yosef who is Viceroy in Egypt. He asks to be buried after he passes away, in the land of Canaan. He wishes to leave the foreign land and be buried as his father and grandfather were. Yosef of course agrees but he says so in a very interesting formula of Hebrew words. He says, ANOCHI EHESE KDVORECHA....translated, loosely, I, I will, do as your words say. Though we understand what is happening, the Hebrew translated provides a problem. Why would Yosef stutter? Why does he say, I,,,,,I will do as you say. Why must the posuk record the extra word, anochi, I then say the word, eeseh, I will do? Why the extra word I ???

A beautiful interpretation comes to mind. You see, the agreement to do as his saintly father asks, was no biggy for the Tzadik Yosef. First, he is the favorite son, he looks and acts like his father! He is powerful and capable of carrying the request through. Secondly, he is asked to do a chessed of truth, an act of kindness as a last will and testament of his father! How could he not? Any evil son would that! So what is this all about? In fact, Yosef Hatzadik is telling us much more. He is giving his dying father a tremendous nachas and amazing feeling will be sending him off to olam habah.

Yosef says, anochi, I will do as you have asked me to do, even for myself, the request you made I will make that very same request from my children and brothers! I will tell, in my dying days, the family of Israel to remove me from this land and return home to Eretz Yisroel! You may have thought that I am in love with Egypt, I being the viceroy! No, I am a Jew, a believer and a true Jew that must be returned from where I came; Shechem in Israel. The brothers MUST return Yosef, who will die the first of the brothers, back from where he was kidnapped. They must make good for 2 reasons. One because they kidnapped him and secondly because they in the end are brothers!

CRAZY ANIMAL CORNER By: Gabriella and Mikayla

Thylacine (Tasmanian Tiger)

- 1) It wasn't really a tiger
Even though people called it the "Tasmanian Tiger," it was actually a marsupial, related to animals like kangaroos and koalas.
- 2) It had a long, stiff tail and could walk quietly. Its tail helped it balance, and it was a very sneaky, quiet walker when searching for food at night.
- 3) Sadly, it is now extinct
The last known Thylacine lived in Tasmania and died in 1936, and scientists still study it to learn more about the species.

By: David Rosenberg

24 Hr Hotline
845-442-2900

Make sure to shovel out nearby fire hydrants after snowfall. Clear at least a 3-foot radius around the hydrant and a path to the street—this ensures firefighters can quickly locate and access it in an emergency, potentially saving minutes that could prevent a small fire from becoming catastrophic.

THIS WEEK IN JEWISH HISTORY By: Avi Hirsch

Rosanna Dyer Osterman helps Confederacy retake Galveston - January 1, 1863
Rosanna Dyer Osterman, born in Germany, was living in Galveston, Texas, in 1862 when Union forces captured the city. She had come to Texas in 1838 to help her husband run his mercantile business. Eventually, she became a leading member of the Jewish community, helping to bring the first rabbi to Texas in 1852. When the Civil War broke out, Osterman, by then a widow, remained in Galveston. While many others left for the mainland, she stayed to nurse the sick and wounded, turning her home into a hospital. After the city was captured by Northern troops, she provided military information to Confederate officers in Houston. This information helped them to successfully recapture Galveston on January 1, 1863. Just three years later, Osterman was killed in a steamboat explosion on the Mississippi River. In her will, she left her considerable fortune, over $200,000, to a host of Jewish and benevolent institutions. Gifts went to Jewish hospitals in New York, New Orleans, and Cincinnati, and enabled the establishment of a Hebrew Benevolent Society in Galveston, which cared for poor and sick people of all faiths. Osterman's bequests also funded synagogues in Houston and Galveston, a Widows and Orphans Home and a Sailors Home in Galveston, as well as a Jewish Foster Home in Philadelphia. In an obituary, the Galveston News lauded Osterman for her "unselfish devotion to the suffering and the sick" and said that "the history of Rosanna Osterman is more eloquently written in the untold charities that have been dispensed by her liberal hands than any eulogy man can bestow."

STORY OF THE WEEK By: Zechariah Lipitz

All of the townspeople turned out to bid farewell to their friend, one of the most respected citizens of the town of Uman. Now an old graybeard, he had decided to set out for the Holy Land, there to spend his last days, and to be buried in the holy soil when the time came. It was only a few months later that they heard the news: he had suddenly returned to Uman after only having spent a few days in Israel. No one could understand why he had suddenly come back, and he made no reply to their repeated questions. He had been back in his hometown only a short while before he took ill and summoned the officials of the Chevra Kadisha (burial society), for he had something of great importance to tell them. They came without delay, but when they arrived the man lay in his bed and chatted randomly about this and that, coming to no particular point. They left disappointed and were surprised when the man called for them again the following day. They were reluctant to go, but their sense of duty won out, and they arrived at his sickbed only to have the whole scene of the previous day repeat itself. The officials listened for a while and then left, concluding that the unfortunate man was not in his right mind. When on the third day the officials of the Chevra Kadisha were summoned again, they flatly refused to come. This time, however, the old man begged their indulgence, promising to explain his behavior of the preceding two days. The officials assembled around the old man's bed, and he turned to them with these words: "When I was a young man, I used to do business traveling from town to town buying and selling merchandise. Since most of my business took me to the vicinity of Berdichev, I used to be sure to stop over for a day or so in order to see the tzadik Rebbe Levi Yitzchak who lived there. "One morning I stopped in Berdichev and went straight to the Rebbe's house. The Rebbe stood wrapped in his talit (prayer shawl), deep in prayer, and I was unwilling to interrupt him, so I sat down in an adjoining room to wait. As I sat absorbed in my own thoughts, I was disturbed by a group of angry people who hustled past me into the Rebbe's study. From the bits of conversation I overheard, I gathered that the man was a poor fellow who earned his living by money-changing. As he had no money of his own, all his transactions were accomplished with borrowed money. The day before, 300 rubles had disappeared from his house, and he was accusing the young maid who worked in his house of stealing it. Her parents pleaded their daughter's innocence, and all were engaged in an angry screaming match. Finally, the Rebbe interrupted, saying, 'It is clear to me that this young woman is completely innocent, and the accusation is erroneous. It is also apparent that the money is truly missing. But where it is, that I cannot discern.' He paced the floor several minutes more, and then said, 'If a person would give me the 300 rubles for this man, I would promise him a place in the World to Come!' "When I heard that I presented myself to the Rebbe with 300 rubles in my hand. 'Would you put that promise into writing?' I asked the tzadik. 'Of course,' he said and I handed over the money. The Rebbe then gave the money to the poor money-changer, and said to him, 'I give you my blessing that you will never suffer a loss again.' Then, he turned to the young woman and said, 'Because you have been falsely accused, I give you my blessing that you will make a good match.' The little group then left the study of the tzadik happy and contented. "When I had the chance, I reminded the tzadik of his promise, and he called to his attendant for a pen, ink and paper. He wrote out a short note and folded it double. He gave it to me saying, 'You must never read this note, nor reveal its contents to another soul. On the day which you sense is your last on earth, call the officials of the Chevra Kadisha and give them this note, asking that they place it inside your grave.' "My joy was immeasurable as I took the note from his hand. To preserve it I had a bookbinder enclose it in the cover of my prayer book. When I left for the Holy Land, I forgot the prayer book. When I realized I didn't have it, I was shocked. After a little reflection on the matter, I decided to return at once. Then when I fell ill, I called for you, but when you arrived, I felt better, so I realized that my last day had not yet come. The same thing happened the second day. I hope that you gentlemen will forgive me. But, today, I feel my end is near, and so I entrust you to follow the instructions of the tzadik, and put this note in my grave." The old man handed over the precious note, and soon after, he departed this world. The officials were curious to know the contents of the note, and they reasoned that although the tzadik had forbidden the man to read it, the prohibition surely didn't extend to them. After the funeral was concluded they took the little note and unfolded it and found these words, "Open for him the gates of the Garden of Eden. Levi Yitzchak the son of Sarah."

A. Seeing the wagons his son had sent from Egypt.

TEFILLAH OF THE WEEK

Yehi Chevod

The glory of Hashem will endure forever

Hashem will rejoice in His works

The Name of Hashem will be blessed from now forever

From the rising of the sun to its setting praised is the Name of Hashem

High above all nations is Hashem above the heavens is His glory

Hashem Your Name is forever Hashem Your Mention is for generations

Hashem has established His throne in heaven His dominion rules over all

The heavens will rejoice the earth will exult and they will proclaim among the nations

Hashem has begun His reign Hashem is King Hashem will be King forever and ever

Hashem will reign for all eternity when nations have perished from His earth

Hashem annuls the counsel of nations He disrupts the intention of peoples

Many thoughts are in the heart of man but only Hashems counsel will endure

The counsel of Hashem will stand forever

the thoughts of His heart throughout all generations

For He spoke and it came to be He commanded and it stood

For Hashem has chosen Tzion He desired it for His dwelling place

For Hashem chose Yakov to be His Israel for His treasure

For Hashem will not cast off His people and His inheritance He will not abandon

And He the Merciful One atones iniquity and does not destroy

He frequently withdraws His anger and does not arouse all His rage

Hashem deliver us! The King will answer us on the day we call
