Make sure to shovel out nearby fire hydrants after snowfall. Clear at least a 3-foot radius around the hydrant and a path to the street—this ensures firefighters can quickly locate and access it in an emergency, potentially saving minutes that could prevent a small fire from becoming catastrophic.

STORY OF THE WEEK

By: Zechariah Lipitz

In his voluminous writings, the Previous Rebbe, Rabbi Yosef Yitzchak, has documented the profound bond he had with his father, Rabbi Sholom Ber, known as the Rebbe Rashab. The following excerpts afford us a glimpse into the unusual childhood years which formed his towering personality. From the year 5647 (1887) [when the author was seven years old] until 5649 (1889) I did not see my parents, because throughout this time they visited various health resorts abroad. Only occasionally did they return home for a few days. My lifestyle during those two years made me forget my earlier memories of my father. The warm closeness which my father showed me from the summer of 5649 onwards erased all traces of the suffering which I had undergone as a result of my wanderings and difficulties in the preceding two years, and once again I recollected everything that I had seen and heard in the years before that period. On the Sabbath my father would pray at considerable length. He would go there when the congregational prayers began at about 9:30 a.m. The congregation finished at about 11:30 a.m. and he would complete his private devotions at about three or sometimes four. Usually, even those individuals who prayed at length had completed their prayers half an hour or at most an hour after the congregation had finished. At this age I recalled that when I had been a very little boy, still taught by Reb Yekusiel, I used to run to shul to hear my father at his prayers. At that time, though, my heart was sad: Why didn't my father daven fast like the whole congregation-like my uncles, for example? Once, in answer to my question, my uncle, Reb Zalman Aharon explained to me that my father wasn't able to read all those letters so fast. This made me really sad. Once, when I was little, I came to shul and found no one there but my father. He was facing the wall and entreating G-d for compassion. I was utterly unable to grasp why he entreated more than all other worshipers and why he was more in need of compassion than other people. Suddenly, my father wept intensely. My heart fell within me: no one was there in the House of G-d but my father, and he was weeping. I listened carefully and heard that he said Shema Yisrael and wept and said HaShem Elokeinu and wept. Then, still weeping, he said from the fullness of his heart and in an awesome voice, Hashem Echad. This time I could contain myself no longer. I went and asked my mother tearfully: "Why does father daven longer than everyone else? My uncle Reb Zalman Aharon says that father can't pronounce the letters quickly, but why can't he read quickly and properly? Besides, today I saw and heard him crying. Mother, come along with me and I'll show you that Father is crying!" "But what can I do?" replied my mother. "Can I send him to a teacher? Go and ask your grandmother. Perhaps she will be able to do something about it." Hastening to follow my mother's advice, I went to put my innocent question to my grandmother. "Your father is a great chasid and a tzadik," she said. "Before any single word leaves his mouth he first thinks of its exact meaning." As I now recall, her answer set my mind at rest. From that time on I related differently to my father, for I now knew that he was different from all other people. At every single step I began to see just who my father was. Other people talked, and talked excitedly; my father was silent most of the time, and when he spoke, he spoke softly. In the course of one month in the summer of 5649 I became a different boy. My father showed me such closeness that I felt all the warmth of a father, all the love of a compassionate father. I went to sleep with the thought that now I, too, had a father and a mother to whom to say goodnight, and in the course of the following two years I completely forgot the bitter conditions under which I had previously lived. In the course of those next two years, I attained understanding. I was now able to appreciate the great difference between my father and his brothers, that is, between his aspirations and theirs. For over a year now I had been listening to his discourses of Chasidic philosophy, standing behind my father as he delivered them. My father was expounding Chasidut and I was there to hear it. In the course of those two years the Sabbaths were holy, and the festivals were devoted to prayer and joy. Every Sabbath I would listen to the Reading of the Torah while following attentively in a Chumash, and in the course of the day I would study the commentary of Rashi as well. Rosh Hashana of the year 5650 (1889) [when the author was nine years old] was the first Rosh Hashana on which I did everything like an adult. And from that day on I was a grown-up.

TEFILLAH OF THE WEEK

Hallelukah #4

ה הללוה - Praise God. Sing a new song to Hashem
His praise in the assembly of the pious
Israel will rejoice in its Maker the children of Israel will exult in their King
They will praise His Name with dance with drum and harp they will make music to Him
Because Adonoy desires His people
He will adorn the humble with deliverance
The pious will rejoice in honor they will sing joyously upon their beds
High praises of the Almighty in their throats and a double-edged sword in their hand
To perform vengeance upon the nations
chastisement upon the peoples
To bind their kings with chains
and their nobles with iron fetters
To execute upon them [the] written judgment
it is the splendor of all His pious ones, Praise God

Parshas Beshalach. Perek 15. Pasuk 21.

"And Miriam sang " " שירו לה' כי גאה גאה ה' סוס ורכבו רמה בים " " The medrash says that because Miriam waited by the Nile for baby Moshe for an "hour" she merited to sing these 9 words. The mishna in Sota (9b) says that because Miriam waited by the Nile for baby Moshe for an "hour", Bnei Yisroel waited seven days in the desert until her tzaraas went away. Let's do some math and put these two chazal's together. There is a rule that Hashem pays back 500 times for a good deed. So it can't be that Miriam actually waited for a full hour for baby Moshe because 500 x 1 hour would be 500 hours which would be about 20 days and Bnei Yisroel only waited 7 days. So she waited only about a third of an hour which is about 20 minutes (according to Tosfos ; Sota 11a). [btw it takes about 20 minutes to walk a "mil" and the pasuk says us at 491 "mil" "ותנתב אחותו מיל מיל". The last three words' first letters are מיל מיל מיל]. Back to the math. A person can walk 10 "parsa's" a day and Bnei Yisroel also walked at night, so they walked 20 "parsa's" a day which is 80 "mil" a day. So during the 6 days of the week, they travelled 480 "mil". The most they could walk on Shabbos was 11 "mil" because of techum Shabbos. This leaves us at 491 "mil" that Bnei Yisroel can walk during a week. We are missing 9 "mil" that Bnei Yisroel did not walk during the week they waited for Miriam (because Hashem pays back 500 x 1 "mil"- 20 minutes,that Miriam waited) . Therefore, Miriam merited to sing these 9 words ("מיל-ים") to get to exactly 500!(Chasam Sofer)

SHEENAYIM MIKRA TORAH BOMB QUESTIONS

By Rabbi Dr. Shaul Schwalb

Why in the world does our Parsha begin with an unnecessary and ridiculous claim about Pharo? The Parsha begins with the Egyptian dictator sending out the Jewish people. How Absurd! He gave up, he lost the battle, he signed the treaty to end his misery! Did he in any way do something positive or kind after having the Jewish people enslaved for 190 years? Having murdered children in the Nile, and being responsible for countless atrocities, did he finally repent? Did he do anything worthwhile?

There is a tremendous principle of Jewish thought that may be attributed to kabalah, chassidus or even mainstream. G-d has a plan that necessitates many players, good, bad and indifferent. These players, much like actors in a play, play a role and as such how they play these parts, what they bring to the parts they play is the free will they have; but play they will. In other words, Moshe, Aaron and even evil Pharo or for that matter evil Haman in the Purim story, all play a part of the endgame, the realization that the Tikun, the correction G-d seeks will always eventually occur.

So Pharo can use his free choice, he can repent as he attempted to after the plague of Aarbah or he can play games even after that. When he does, that his free will as an individual is over. It is obvious what deep down he wants, G-d will allow him what he really wishes. When he sends off the Jewish people, he does so with good wishes, in a proper way. He does not have to. Bshalach is when Pharo indeed takes a moment of sanity and the Jewish people are the better for it, as they can leave with just a little less of a slavery mentality. True, not until the slaves see the masters dead on the sea will the paranoia stop, but the sending off of the Jewish people in a proper way was a nice act by Pharo. Yes, he will regret it and chase to the death the former slaves, but because the Egyptian people gave of the wealth and clothes to the former slaves, those slaves felt like equals. Even the most evil eventually will acknowledge the only G-d and his truth. That truth will occur regardless of any evil force against it, and in the end the Tikun will be achieved, through the righteous Moshe, Aaron and even through the evil Pharo or Haman in his day. Haman will hang off the tree he made for the righteous Mordechai but in the end, his grandchildren will learn in Bnai Brak. The Egyptians will deserve burial in that sea because they escorted the former slaves, they did the deed of Bshalach and as such in sefer Dvarim, we are told not to pain the Egyptian in the future. When Pharo sends the people out of Egypt he does so in a pleasant way. Regardless of the chase he will pursue to yam suf afterwards, he and his people will receive some reward, and as such they too will eventually get the Tikun that G-d always seeks.

RECIPE OF THE WEEK

By: Chanalee-The Challah Fairy

Beef with Broccoli and Rice

1 lb (450 g) flank steak or sirloin, thinly sliced
1 tsp baking soda
1 tbsp cornstarch
2 tbsp soy sauce
1 tbsp dry sherry
1 tsp sugar
2 tbsp neutral oil
4 cups broccoli florets
1 onion, sliced
4 garlic cloves, chopped
2 tsp fresh grated ginger
Toasted sesame seeds, for garnish

Sauce
1 cup mushroom broth (or beef broth)
2 tbsp soy sauce
1 tsp sugar
1 tsp cornstarch
Fluffy Jasmine Rice
2 cups jasmine rice, washed and drained
4 cups water
½ tsp salt
3 tbsp oil

Start by marinating the beef. Add sliced beef to a bowl with baking soda, soy sauce, sherry, sugar, cornstarch, and oil. Mix well, cover, and set aside (this can be done hours ahead or even the day before).

Prepare the rice. Add rice, water, salt, and oil to a pot and bring to a boil. Once the water and rice are level, cover, lower to a simmer, and cook for 10 minutes. Fluff, turn off the heat, cover again, and let rest another 10 minutes. Slice onions, chop garlic and broccoli, and rinse broccoli well. Whisk together all sauce ingredients and set aside. Heat a large pan over medium heat. Sear the beef until nicely browned, about 5 minutes. Remove and set aside. In the same pan, saute onions, garlic, and ginger for about 3 minutes. Add broccoli with ¼ cup water, cover, and steam just until tender (skip if you like it extra crisp). Return beef to the pan, mix well, pour in the sauce, and cook a few more minutes until glossy and thick. Finish with toasted sesame seeds. Serve beef & broccoli over fluffy jasmine rice and enjoy!

Snowshoe Hares

1. They change color with the seasons. Snowshoe hares turn white in winter to blend into snow, and brown in summer to match dirt and leaves. It's like a natural invisibility cloak.
2. Their feet are built like snowshoes. They have huge, furry feet that spread their weight out so they don't sink into deep snow, just like wearing real snowshoes.
3. They can outrun most predators. Snowshoe hares can sprint up to 30–35 miles per hour, zig-zagging through the forest to escape foxes, lynx, and owls.

THIS WEEK IN JEWISH HISTORY

By: Avi Hirsch

Belzer Rebbe Rescued from the Holocaust (1944) - 9 Shvat.

After a series of hair-raising escapes from Gestapo agents in Poland and Hungary, R. Aharon Rokeach, fourth Rebbe of Belz, safely arrived in the Land of Israel. He was accompanied by his brother, R. Mordechai, father of the present Belzer Rebbe, R. Yissachar Dov.

During World War II, Belzer Hasidim both inside and outside Nazi-occupied Europe saw saving the Rebbe as their primary goal. They spirited Rokeach — who insisted on being accompanied by his half-brother, Rabbi Mordechai — out of Belz into Wiśnicz, then into the Bochnia Ghetto, then into the Kraków Ghetto, and then back into the Bochnia Ghetto, narrowly avoiding Gestapo roundups and deportations.

In their most hair-raising escape attempt, the brothers were driven out of occupied Poland and into Hungary by a Hungarian counter-intelligence agent who was friendly to Jews. Rokeach, his attendant, and Rabbi Mordechai, shorn of their distinctive beards and sidelocks, (they cut off their beards and payos) were disguised as Russian generals who had been captured at the front and were being taken to Budapest for questioning. After spending eight months in Hungary, the brothers boarded the Orient Express to Istanbul and finally arrived in Mandatory Palestine in February 1944.

Both men lost their entire families to the Nazis. Rokeach's eldest son, Moshe, was burned alive in the Przemyslan shul at the same time as Rokeach was in hiding in that town. Later, Rabbi Moshe's wife and five children were murdered. Rokeach's eldest daughter, Rivka Miriam, and her husband, Rabbi Shmuel Frankel, both perished along with their seven children. Rokeach's other daughters, Adel Twersky and Sara Bracha Rosenfeld with their children, and two other sons, Rabbi Yisrael and Rabbi Yehudah Zundel with their children, were also slain. When he heard of these tragedies, Rokeach displayed no emotion. Stoically, he continued to lead his Hasidim and perform his devotions.

Hilchos Bracha Achronah

If one ate and did not immediately recite a Bracha Achronah, he may recite it until the time the food has been digested, that is, after eating fruit, as long as he is not hungry for more fruit, he could still make a Bracha Achronah. After that, he may not make a Bracha Achronah. Short Halacha from this week's Kitzur Shulchan Aruch Yomi - Chapter 51 Seif 14
