STORY OF THE WEEK By: Zechariah Lipitz

Baruch was a follower of the Baal Shem Tov. Baruch's wife, Rivka, was a Torah scholar, quite unusual for women of those days. When Baruch and Rivka had been married for a year and were still not blessed with a child, they went to see the Baal Shem Tov, to ask for his blessing. The Baal Shem Tov's birthday was the 18th of Elul. At the repast on that auspicious day, the Baal Shem Tov blessed Baruch and Rivka and promised them that, exactly a year later, they would become the parents of a boy. Baruch and Rivka spent the entire period of the High Holy Days with the Baal Shem Tov in Miedzibos. Before departing for home, they saw the Baal Shem Tov again. When the Baal Shem Tov repeated his blessing, Rivka fervently promised that she would consecrate her son to the dissemination of Torah and the Chasidic doctrine and way of life as taught by the Baal Shem Tov. Rivka decided to intensify her Torah studies and asked her learned sister-in-law Devorah Leah for guidance as to prayer and study during her anticipated pregnancy. Six months later, Baruch went to Miedzibos again, to inform the Baal Shem Tov that his wife was pregnant. The Baal Shem Tov wished him "Mazel Tov" and gave him certain instructions to convey to his wife. Baruch left for home in a blissful frame of mind. On the 18th day of Elul (that year a Wednesday, the fourth day of the week), which was his birthday, the Baal Shem Tov displayed an extraordinary elation. He personally led the prayers, which he chanted in joyous melodies. It was clear that the Baal Shem Tov was observing that day as an especially festive day. During the repast which followed the prayers, the Baal Shem Tov told his disciples: Today, a new soul descended to earth, a soul which will illuminate the world with the revealed and esoteric teachings of the Torah and will successfully disseminate the Chasidic way with selfless dedication, preparing the way for the arrival of Moshiach. On the 25th day of Elul (when the circumcision of Baruch and Rivka's son took place in Liozna), the Baal Shem Tov arranged a feast. Three days later, on the Shabbat he again gave a discourse, and he was in a manifestly elated frame of mind. All of this represented a mystery to his disciples and followers. What the Baal Shem Tov's disciples witnessed in those days was nothing else but their master celebrating the birth of Shneur Zalman, his circumcision, and the critical third day after the circumcision. Moreover, the various discourses which the Baal Shem Tov delivered on those occasions were connected with the newborn's destiny. For Yom Kippur that year, Baruch came to Miedzibos to be with the Baal Shem Tov. He had been forewarned not to tell anybody about the birth of his son, nor the name which had been given to him. Again, before leaving for home, he received from the Baal Shem Tov a set of instructions as to the discipline which was to surround the child, and the careful watch which was to be kept over him at all times. The following year Baruch came, as usual, to the Baal Shem Tov for the High Holidays. The Baal Shem Tov inquired about the little boy in great detail and repeated his admonition to take special care of the child. After Sukot, when Baruch was ready to leave for home, the Baal Shem Tov again cautioned him to shelter the boy, and not to repeat any of his clever acts or sayings, as some parents are fond of boasting about their children. Another year passed by. Once again Baruch made his annual pilgrimage to Miedzibos. Baruch reported to the Baal Shem Tov that, upon returning home from Miedzibos after Sukot, his wife told him that there was a noticeable change in the boy on his second birthday. His speech and vocabulary had considerably improved. During the year, the parents discovered that the boy had an extraordinary memory, and whatever he heard once, he never forgot. The Baal Shem Tov gave Baruch further instructions concerning the boy. Upon Baruch's request for permission to bring the boy to the Baal Shem Tov on his third birthday for the traditional "hair-cutting" ceremony, the Baal Shem Tov told him that the boy should be brought by his mother and aunt Devorah Leah, and they should come to him on the 18th of Elul, after the morning prayers. Arriving home, Baruch found that the boy had made further strides in his absence from home. Little Shneur Zalman could now recite many Psalms by heart, and his memory and mental grasp were astonishing. According to plan, Rivka and her sister-in-law, Devorah Leah, brought the boy, on his third birthday, to the Baal Shem Tov. The Baal Shem Tov cut off a few locks of hair, leaving peyot (side curls) according to custom, and he blessed him. He then sent the visitors home, with his blessing for a safe journey and for the new year. All the way home, little Shneur Zalman kept on asking his mother who the old Jew was who had cut his hair. "That was Zaida," was her reply. Little did he then know that someday he would come to regard the Baal Shem Tov as his spiritual "grandfather" in a very real sense, namely, as the Rebbe or his Rebbe, the Maggid of Miezricz, to whom he owed his spiritual fulfillment.

MEGA VORT By: Yoel Megadesh

Parshas Ki Savo. Perek 29. Pasuk 4.

This pasuk explains how Hashem made sure Bnei Yisroel's shoes did not wear out during the 40 years wandering in the desert. However, in parsha Eikev(8:4) the pasuk says that their "foot did not swell" and Rashi explains that it did not swell "like people who are barefoot". So the question is , did Bnei Yisroel wear shoes in the desert or not?

The answer is that Bnei Yisroel were put in excommunication after the sin of the spies and there is an opinion in the gemara (moed katan 15b) which states that someone in excommunication may not wear shoes. Now, only those who were above 20 years old were excommunicated and they could not wear shoes. But anyone under 20 was able to wear shoes. (Nesivos Hadaas)

Which tribe is missing on these representative courses that are eleven?

Shimon is above blessing and above curses. Shimon hears the essence the soul of the human being.

Use frozen, then defrosted bananas to make the bread extra moist. The liquid from the defrosted bananas is the key. Add the liquid to your batter. Squeeze the bananas out of the thawed peel. They will look gross. They are yummy.
Mix all ingredients together at the same time.

Rebbe Bunim was known for his great wisdom, and his first rebbe, the Chozeh of Lublin, said about him

When he was a young man, Rabbi Simcha Bunim was the financial director for the wealthy Bergson family. He would travel around the world on business and he learned many languages. Even after he became a Rebbe, Rebbe Simcha Bunim would travel incognito to Germany in order to bring Jews there closer to God. Once he traveled to Germany to reach out to a particular Jew. He saw him entering a place that was totally off-limits to God-fearing Jews. Rebbe Simcha Bunim had no problem entering bars and taverns, where he would place chess and cards with the other customers and by doing so, eventually bring them close to God – but this was a place that was absolutely prohibited to enter. The tzaddik stood outside and began to sing a chassidic melody. He sang and sang, until the Jew exited and Rebbe Simcha Bunim managed to bring him back to God.
